Vadim Sidur Museum, Moscow
25 October — 15 November 2015

On October 24, the Vadim Sidur Museum will open an exhibition called Event Horizons organized by the students of the Institute of Contemporary Art and curated by Stanislav Shuripa.

Artists who have completed their first year of studies at the Institute of Contemporary Art contemplate in their works the typical features of what could be described as the spirit of our time, the Zeitgeist. Their focus is on the complex and sometimes dramatic relationship between form and meaning, systems and events, rules and exceptions. The atmosphere of ambiguity and uncertainty of the current historical moment is expressed in the diversity of artistic methods and subjects.

The Institute of Contemporary Art was established by a group of artists, art critics and art theorists in 1991, with the aim of organizing exhibitions, research and education projects in the field of the visual arts. All initiatives of the ICA have aimed to reintegrate Russian art into the international art world's structures. More than 650 artists have graduated from ICA since its foundation.
